Know the Signs

Real estate signs are an integral component of the REALTORS®' business arsenal. They allow the agent to effectively market a property, and they serve as an important directional aide when conducting an open house. With the advent of technology, real estate signs now function in conjunction with many other marketing tools available to the REALTOR®. However, they retain their status as one of the most important methods of marketing a home. Unfortunately, real estate signs can become the source of controversy in a community. If residents perceive a preponderance of real estate signs, they will put pressure on local government officials to restrict the display of the signs. Fortunately, state laws exist to protect the rights of real estate practitioners and home owners to market properties via real estate signs. The laws balance these rights with the community's need to control visual clutter and safety. It's important that you the REALTOR® know the law and follow the signage rules to ensure that this powerful marketing tool remain in Santa Cruz County. Signs are never allowed in public right of ways, sidewalks, streets, gutters, alleys. Never obstruct any type of traffic. Never allow a sign to be a safety hazard! Below is a link to the sign ordinances for the Santa Cruz County that also includes what to do if there is an issue.
